

Johan Mora Valverde is a Co-Director at the SPAN Parent Advocacy Network, New Jersey's Parent Training and Information Center funded by the U.S. Department of Education. Johan works to remove barriers for families, especially those from immigrant and underrepresented communities, helping them become confident advocates. He is involved in state, regional, and national initiatives that ensure family voices help shape services. A Rutgers University graduate and an alum of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute 2022 Internship Program, Johan's work is inspired by his family's experience with autism and his roots as the son of Costa Rican immigrants.
